

Viet Nam Is Given Help by U. S. Jets

By JOHN GRIFFIN

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—Four U.S. Air Force F101 reconnaissance jets are credited by reliable informants with a powerful assist to South Viet Nam as scouts in its war against Red rebels.

South Vietnamese sources say the jets, which have been operating from Saigon's International Airport for three weeks, are flying missions to pinpoint photographically the secret bases, staging areas and movements of the Communist Viet Cong troops.

They said highly detailed pictures taken by the jet pilots guide South Vietnamese fighter-bombers in strikes against well-guarded and sometimes almost inaccessible guerrilla installations.

The reports coincided with the arrival of the U.S. Pacific Fleet commander, Adm. John M. Sides, for a one-day visit. Asked if the 7th Fleet might be used in Viet Nam if the military situation worsens, Sides replied, "The center of gravity of the 7th Fleet is always near where the most trouble is."

A large number of high-ranking air force and marine officers have been arriving in Saigon for several days. All say officially that their visits are part of Southeast Asia tours for routine indoctrination.

Saigon newspapers have been telling of a series of successful raids by government warplanes on rebel boats, buildings and troop units.

The United States provided the planes and the U.S. Air Force has built up an extensive supply and training operation for South Vietnamese airmen and ground crews.

However, a U.S. Embassy official played down the role of the F101s. He said they came here Oct. 22 for exhibition during the celebration of South Viet Nam's National Day Oct. 26—a celebration which was cancelled long in advance—and remained "just to log some flying time."

County Board Political Device to Make It Tough to Eliminate Super

(Last of 3 Editorials)

Word reached us over the weekend that someone is circulating a rumor claiming The Star's campaign to eliminate the office of County School Supervisor is merely a smoke-screen to cover up some school district consolidations.

This is not true. The office of County School Supervisor — known as County Superintendent when this editor moved to Hope in 1929 — has been the subject of controversy all through the years. Act 159 of 1957 was supposed to have made it easier for the people to get rid of the office, and therefore The Star proposed to test the operation and find out.

We had planned to run this Hempstead county test early enough to get the information and the campaign outline before all the newspapers of the state. The Associated Press carried a story Sunday morning on the Hempstead county campaign — but not in sufficient detail to furnish a plan for other counties seeking similar action. Therefore we are gathering up these three editorials, together with the legal references, and will put them in a pamphlet reprint for state-wide distribution.

Act 159 of 1957 was supposed to have made this fight easier, but it still requires the reform to be accomplished by the County Board of Education — and gaining control of that body is a drawn-out and complicated affair. For instance, four out of the five members of the Hempstead Board are nominated and elected from individual zones or school districts. That is, if the man coming up for re-election happened to be from another zone the people in that zone alone would vote — you in Hope or any other zone of the county would have no voice whatever. This setup traces back to Act 327 of 1941; and Act 229 of 1953.

But this year we had a lucky break, for the Board member coming up for re-election is a member-at-large, meaning a candidate can be nominated from anywhere in the county and the whole county will vote. The member-at-large is Milton Peebles of Saratoga, who has refused to commit himself on abolishment of the office of County School Supervisor. Opposed to him is Herbert M. Stephens of Blevins, pledged to abolition of the office, and for whom a nominating petition is now being circulated in Hope and Blevins. If Mr. Stephens is elected in the school voting December 5 we will have two of the five-man board — Ralph Lehman of Hope and Mr. Stephens — pledged to wipe out the Supervisor office. And there is always the possibility one of the other three members may come over to our way of thinking, overturning the majority of the board.

For the first time in the history of Hempstead county, as far as this editor knows, we are publishing in this editorial the facts about the County Board of Education. Here is the membership as of today:

Milton Peebles of Saratoga, representing the county at large, elected for a five-year term in 1956, and whose term expires this year — to be filled in the December 5 school election.

Hugh Garner of Spring Hill, representing Zone One, elected in 1957, and whose term expires in 1962. Mr. Garner is president of the board.

Carl Martin of Washington, representing Zone Three, elected in 1958, and whose term expires in 1963.

Ralph Lehman of Hope, representing Zone Two (Hope School District), elected in 1959, and whose term expires in 1964.

Andrew Avery of Prescott Route Five (Baird's Chapel, Hempstead county), representing Zone Four or the Blevins area, elected in 1960, and whose term expires in 1965.

The difficulty of finding a nominee, circulating a petition, and conducting a vote campaign in one isolated rural zone is obvious. Not enough cavalry, and too many Indians.

Our chance of a county-wide nomination and vote on Mr. Peebles' member-at-large post is the big break of this campaign.

Maybe all this will give you a measure of the task we are engaged in.

The legislature might have thought it was helping us with Act 159 of 1957, — but the longer you reflect on it the more you realize the legislature was merely passing the buck on an abolition job it should have done itself.

Verdict of Death Upset by U. S. Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court set aside today the conviction of Charles Clarence Hamilton, a Negro sentenced to death in Alabama on charges he broke into a dwelling "with intent to ravish" a white woman.

Counsel for Hamilton contended the Negro was denied due process of law guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution because he did not have aid of a lawyer when he was arraigned on the charges.

Justice Douglas delivered the unanimous decision. Douglas said: "When one pleads to a capital charge without benefit of counsel, we do not stop to determine whether prejudice resulted. In this case the degree of prejudice can never be known. Only the presence of counsel could have enabled this accused to know all the defenses available to him and to plead intelligently."

The high court action does not prevent Alabama from further prosecution efforts against Hamilton.

Hamilton was discovered in the bedroom of Mary Gianguoso in Ensley, Ala., about 3 o'clock on the morning of Oct. 13, 1956.

Jacob Milko, owner of the house, held Hamilton at pistol point until police arrived. Mrs. Gianguoso was the grandmother of Mrs. Milko.

Hamilton was sentenced to the electric chair on April 23, 1957, and his counsel then began appeal moves. The counsel said there was no evidence that the grandmother was harmed or that Hamilton had weapons or burglar tools.

U. S. Gives Up Plan to Orbit Man in 1961

By HOWARD BENEDICT

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Spacecraft trouble has delayed an attempt to orbit a chimpanzee and virtually wiped out United States' hopes of orbiting a man this year.

Project Mercury officials called off Tuesday's scheduled chimpanzee launch after a test Sunday disclosed a gas leak in the space capsule's in-flight control system.

This necessitated removing the two-ton craft from atop the Atlas booster rocket, which is on the launching pad. Inspection, repair and replacement will take at least a week, perhaps as much as two weeks.

Smart Deer Finds Himself a Hideaway No Hunter Can Reach in Kentucky Wilds

PRESTONSBURG, Ky. (AP) — Oswald is a deer who loves people.

Hundreds of residents of this eastern Kentucky area worried themselves sick about Oswald during the four-day open season on deer when hunters stalked the colorful hill country.

They didn't take into account that Oswald was as clever as he is lovable. Oswald deftly beat a strategic retreat to a remote section where there was almost no hunting.

There, said conservation officer Raymond Copley, Oswald has been living in grassy pastureland. In bad weather, he makes use of a warm barn provided by Bill Boyd, a farmer in the Calf Creek section of Floyd County.

From his bin in about 21 months ago, Oswald has trusted people. For quite a while he lived with them, romping on lawns, meandering into the house, and feeding himself in neighborhood gardens, until next year.

Heart and Cancer Toll Near Peak

By JOHN BARBOUR
Associated Press Science Writer

DETROIT (AP)—Dead men do tell tales.

Deaths mark the great epidemics and changing ways of the living—and now they may indicate that heart disease and lung cancer are nearing the peak of their deadliness, a scientist said today.

Dr. Reimert T. Ravenholt was a featured speaker at the opening session of the annual meeting of the American Public Health Association. He told of a study of death records for the Seattle-King County area that went back 85 years.

Recent records indicate that the death rates from coronary heart disease and lung cancer have ceased to increase for persons under 60, he said, and also indicate that "both these epidemics should reach plateau or peak within 10 to 15 years."

Dr. Ravenholt cited death statistics based on official records and newspapers dating back to 1876, compiled with the aid of University of Washington students.

The records for the Seattle area told the story of changing times through the changing ways in which men met their death, he said.

In the same way the study of more recent death statistics can shed light on modern diseases, said Dr. Ravenholt, who is now Public Health Service consultant with the U.S. Embassy in Paris.

From the statistics you can infer that lung cancer and heart disease are reaching their high points, he said.

When he added tobacco leaves to his diet, the neighbors decided to evict him. He was sent to the Dewey Lake area to become what he was born to be—a wild deer.

He didn't understand. He made new friends: campers, fishermen, hunters, conservation officers in the state park. He never became gun shy.

As deer season approached, his friends began to worry. They decided to house him in a barn until it was safe again outside. This time Oswald balked. He wouldn't be caught.

Each of the four nights during the deer season which ended Saturday at sundown, one of Oswald's closest friends, Arnold Workman, checked the stations which register the hunters' kills.

Oswald wasn't among the dead. Now he is free again to roam the hill country. The people who doted on him have stopped worrying himself in neighborhood gardens, until next year.

2 Die Flying to Funeral at Prescott

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP)—Two brothers en route to the funeral of their brother-in-law plunged to death in their light plane near here Saturday night.

The Federal Aviation Agency said it was bringing the brothers' single-engine Piper Tri-Pacer in for what could have been a routine instrument landing when the crash occurred.

The wreckage was not found until Sunday because a search was hampered by heavy fog.

The dead men were W. R. Cox, 41, the pilot, of Chicago, and Dr. Gordon F. Cox, 55, a Gallatin, Tenn., chiropractor.

Cause of the crash still is not known.

Police reconstructed the ill-fated flight this way:

W. R. Cox took off in his plane Saturday morning from Chicago, where he operates an automobile agency, William Medley of Chicago was with him, but Medley got off the plane in Nashville on business.

Cox flew on to Gallatin and met his brother. They had planned to stay overnight, relatives said, but decided to go on to Prescott, Ark., Saturday night for the funeral of Clyde Watson Buchanan Sr.

They refueled at Steele in the Missouri foothills, and continued southwest toward Prescott. They were making an instrument landing at Pine Bluff when the plane crashed in a wooded draw between two cotton fields. It did not burn.

Both men are survived by their widows and three children.

the spacecraft trouble was a leak in the hydrogen peroxide gas system which controls the position of the vehicle in flight. The gas is highly corrosive and could have damaged electrical or other systems.

Successful completion of the chimpanzee shot this week was almost a must if the National Aeronautics and Space Administration was to have a chance of rocketing a human astronaut into orbit in 1961.

A minimum of four weeks is required between Mercury-Atlas launchings to qualify all systems. Such a schedule can be met only if all checkouts are perfect, something not yet achieved in preparations for Mercury firings.

Eight weeks have passed since an Atlas successfully hurled an unmanned capsule into orbit in November. Several minor problems with the complex missile and capsule stretched out the planned four-week checkout period for the chimpanzee shot.

One project source reported: "We were down to the point where every day was important. Now, every hour is essential. With fantastic luck we could still send a man up this year."

Others were not so optimistic. Two Soviet cosmonauts orbited earlier this year. Two American astronauts took brief suborbital rocket rides.

The plan calls for the Atlas to hurl the clump-carrying capsule into orbit 100 to 150 miles above the earth at 17,400 miles an hour. After three sweeps around the globe, lasting 4½ hours, reverse rockets are to slow the vehicle for return to earth. Parachuts are to ease it into the Atlantic Ocean about 1,000 miles southeast of Cape Canaveral.

When the launching was postponed, a large part of the Atlantic Fleet, was being deployed across the Atlantic from Cape Canaveral to the African Coast to act as recovery forces.

Words Fail This Wife

By HELEN WORDEN ERSKINE

Dear Helen: How do I tell my husband I no longer love him? I've tried to make a go of our marriage but it's no use. We married too young; I was only 15.2. After three years of trial and error I'm at the end of my rope.

Our little daughter was born the second year—our son this year. When I told my husband this baby was on the way he appeared happy but not for long. That night he stomped into the living room shouting he'd had enough of married life and never wanted to see me or our little girl again.

I just stared, too stunned to speak. That really maddened him. Yelling, "Get out, I'm giving up the house. Go to your mother's and stay there," he left, banging the door after him.

My mother took me and my daughter in. While I was waiting for the baby to come, a boy I'd gone with before I married, dropped by. When he heard my story he said, "Get a divorce. I've never stopped loving you." He even offered to adopt my children. Here was someone who really cared what happened to me!

I filed for divorce and planned to marry this boy. My baby was born last July. Soon after, like a bad penny, my husband turned up again. He begged me to bring our babies and come back, promising to spend the rest of his life making us happy. So I called off the divorce and returned to a hell on earth.

I am a prisoner in my own home. I can't even go to the corner grocery unless someone goes with me. My husband is so insanely jealous that I fear for my life. Because I am miserable, so are the children. To live with this maniac is sheer torture. And yet, I feel sorry for him. He has never grown up. But if I don't get away I shall die.

How can I tell this wretched unhappy man the truth? Works fail me. Help me find them. —Desperate

Dear Desperate: Words fail you because, in your heart of hearts, you aren't sure what the truth really is. Had you loved the first boy, you never would have dropped divorce proceedings to return to a husband who abandoned you.

Granted that the happiness of the children is largely dependent upon your happiness but are you sure where this happiness lies? Better think things through. If possible, return to your mother's with the babies. Once your own feelings are clarified the words will come easily and you'll cease to vacillate.

Dear Helen: Though 14 years old I'm still afraid of the dentist. Will my fears fade naturally, as I grow up or is there something I can do about it now? —Mike of Carteret, N.J.

Dear Mike: We're all—young and old—afraid of the dentist. The only way to conquer this fear is to face up to it. Periodic visits to the dentist are vital to our health. And remember this, no man ever went into battle without fear. But there's nothing quite equal to the satisfaction of overcoming that fear.

Dear Helen: I am a 16-year-old girl living with my mother and step-father in a trailer home. It is neat and clean and home to us. We take pride in keeping it so. Yet every time my uncle comes to see us he says, "People who live in trailers lose all pride. Move on to something better." How can I change his way of thinking? —Disturbed

Dear Disturbed: It's your home, not your uncle's. If you and your family are happy, why worry? But there is this to be said for his thinking. Never be satisfied with less than the best. As you grow older you'll want a home large enough to entertain your friends. How about earning money with that as a goal? Accidents Kill More Than Disease

Annually, accidents are responsible for more childhood deaths than the combined total of seven of deadliest of diseases.

One cause of childhood deaths is accidental poisoning from medicines. Children are not aware that medicine can be harmful if too much is taken.

Authorities claim that there are three steps involved in the accidental poisoning of children:

1. Parents underestimate a child's ability to climb to high places and open bottles.
2. Medicines are left where children can reach them.
3. The medicine taken by the child was not in its usual location when the accident occurred.

Parents are urged to keep all medicines out of sight and out of reach of children.

Even though — or perhaps because — Cornelia was her sister, it was difficult for Margaret to go over, in imagination, the scene that must have taken place between Cornelia and Philip when, with all plans made for the vacation the doctor had recommended after Cornelia's severe bout of flu, the housekeeper they had arranged for had fallen and broken a hip.

It wasn't only a question of Hilary, the daughter of friends of Philip's who were trying a reconciliation in Mexico City; the house was not a house to lock the door upon lightly. There was the antique furnace to be considered, the paintings, the locked closets and cupboards full of Mrs. Foale's silver and valuable china. You took on, in a rented house, all the responsibilities of the owner, and if it were left invitingly dark for night after night, while newspapers accumulated visibly on the front lawn, you asked for trouble.

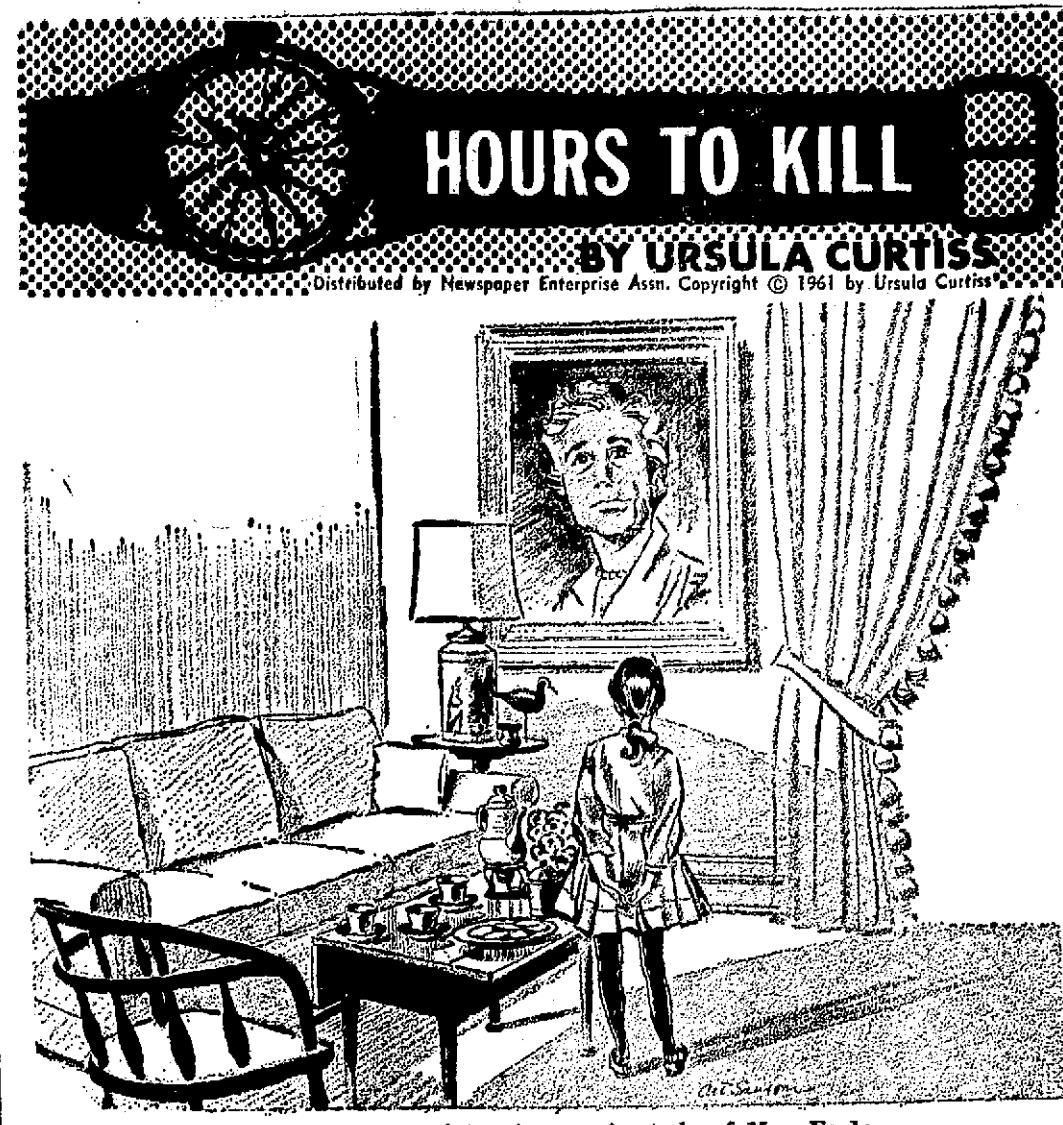

It was certainly Philip who would have thought of Margaret. "She's your sister, isn't she? If she knew you'd been ill and hadn't been able to get away, and had a relapse just because you wouldn't ask her—"

"Yes, I know, but . . ."

They would have argued it back and forth then. True, Philip and Margaret had been as good as engaged before Cornelia came to his attention — but Margaret was an adult and knew that those things happened. She was, Philip would urge, very attractive, went about a good deal, had probably forgotten him long since. She might even be congratulating herself on the narrow escape.

"I'll put the call through," he would have said to Cornelia, "and you talk to her. If she's tied up and can't come, that's that and we unpack. But at least let her know."

And Cornelia had. It was only the second time that Margaret had talked to her since the wedding and their departure for the Southwest, and she was so steeled to an off-hand exchange of news

Hilary began a quiet, microscopic study of Mrs. Foale.

By URSULA CURTISS

Chapter I

They said goodbye in the beautiful shadowy living room, Cornelia counting her gloves as though there might possibly be more than two of them. Margaret straightening an ashtray on the piano in a brisk taking-over gesture. Philip, foresightedly, had gone out to the car and was doing a great deal of door-slammings.

"Well . . . goodbye."

"Goodbye, and for heaven's sake don't worry."

"I wouldn't," said Cornelia with a hunted glance about her, "if it weren't for that child. No wonder her parents are on the brink of divorce. Infanticide would be more like it." She gave Margaret a direct look that undid all her previous appearance of blindness, and said, "I haven't dared ask if you mind this. Coming here, I mean."

"Don't be foolish," said Margaret lightly. She saw Cornelia flush unhappily and, for the moment, didn't care.

Cornelia walked down the steps and across the lawn to the waiting car. Philip, bare-headed in the sun, took his wife's arm and handed her into the car. Back on the driver's side, he looked up at Margaret, smiling, and threw up a hand in salute. "See you on the twentieth, Mag. Take care."

The "Mag" had slipped out; he was the only one who had ever called her that. It was a shock to realize that memory could be so one-sided. "Take care yourself," she called back, and waved to Cornelia's ducked-down face through the windshield as the car edged out of the drive, and she stepped into the house again. The pale shining day vanished, the dim elegance of the immense living room surrounded her.

They were obviously happy, both of them, Margaret thought; already, with the prospect of getting away alone with Philip, Cornelia was reviving. She described their desperate house-hunting and their relief when Mrs. Hadley Foale, sojourning in Europe, had decided to rent her house. It was much too big for them, but there were trees and lawns, indispensable to Eastern eyes, and beggars couldn't be choosers.

The arrival of young Hilary Revertson had posed a problem. They could hardly refuse an appeal from old friends of Philip's; on the other hand, the real estate agent had let it be known that Mrs. Foale was fanatical on the subject of children and pets in her home. Cornelia, coming down with flu, had spent most of a day moving ornaments to high closet shelves, putting away the good glasses, cautioning Hilary about Mrs. Foale's property.

"Every time I opened my mouth, Mrs. Foale came out," said Cornelia wryly. "In fact, I'm sure Hilary thinks Mrs. Foale created the world."

Her voice stopped, her gaze stilled on a point to Margaret's right. Margaret half-turned her head, and met the examining gaze of a small bathrobed girl in the hall doorway. She seemed to be seven or eight years old, although Margaret arrived at that only from her size; her face was startlingly knowledgeable. She studied Margaret as a mother would a child, with an untroubled, uncompassing glance, and then looked at Cornelia. She said badly, "Who's that?"

"Why, that's—that's your Aunt Margaret," said Cornelia falsely heartily. "Would you like to come in and be introduced, Hilary?"

"Hilary" corrected the child. "Cornelia closed her eyes, either out of fatigue or exasperation. "Hilary."

"Is she going to stay while you're gone?"

Cornelia said yes, in the same submissive way. Neither she nor Philip told the child to go to bed; it entered Margaret's mind that Hilary, crossed, was somebody to reckon with.

Lena — Margaret didn't know and never found out her last name—was a small, slim, dark girl who came twice a week to do the cleaning. She did not know that Hilary was a student at progressive school in New York and the problem child of problem parents, and she treated her with a calm indifference which, to Margaret's astonishment, Hilary appeared to love.

On March 12, disturbing to Margaret even at the time, Hilary began a quiet, microscopic study of Mrs. Foale.

Razorbacks Have Bowl Bid in Sight

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — With a major bowl bid all but juggling in their jeans, the Arkansas Razorbacks get down to work this week for the easy end of their Southwest Conference football schedule.

The Perkers who maulled Rice 10-0 Saturday, face Southern Methodist in Dallas Saturday and close out against Texas Tech in Little Rock Nov. 25.

The triumph over Rice — a great deal more convincing than the score indicates — shoved the Razorbacks atop the list of contenders for two bowls — the Bludonnet at Houston and the Gator at Jacksonville, Fla.

A shot at the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans isn't out of the question in case Louisiana State gets one bid. Two prime bowl teams — Ole Miss and Georgia Tech — probably wouldn't be considered because they've already met LSU and Alabama will be tempted — if the offer comes — to go to the Cotton Bowl for a tilt at Texas, the only team rated above the Crimson Tide.

Arkansas, of course, can't be counted out of the Southwest Conference race and a Cotton Bowl invitation, but a miffy situation develops here. Even if Arkansas gets by SMU and Tech, outrunning Texas would have to lose to both Texas Christian this Saturday and Texas A&M on Thanksgiving Day for the Hogs to take the title out right.

If Arkansas wins twice and Texas loses once, the Steers and Perkers will share the title, but Texas will get the Cotton Bowl bid because it beat Arkansas in regular season play.

Arkansas' domination of Rice is reflected in a single statistic — the figure which shows the Owl's deepest penetration was to Arkansas' 44-yard line. Rice didn't get across midfield in the first half as the Hogs ran their string of victories over the Owls to four in a row.

The Perkers preserved Coach Frank Broyles' record of never having lost a November game since he came to Arkansas.

Arkansas struck for a third-quarter field goal that was enough to win the game, then added an icing touchdown in the final period. Mickey Cissell booted the

Yerger Loses to Southeast Pine Bluff

Friday night at Hammons Stadium the Yerger Tigers took another shelling, losing to Southeast Pine Bluff by 41 to 6.

The locals were beaten on passes and steals. Their only score came on a Southeast fumble that was picked up by Winfred Yerger and taken for a touchdown. Try for point failed.

Although it was a lopsided defeat the Tigers' front defensive wall gave up nothing on the ground. This wall comprised Colbert, Gully, Sullivan, Trotter, Criner, and Shaw.

Three-pointers from 27 yards after he had missed twice from 23 yards in the first half.

Halfback Lance Alworth started the touchdown drive by returning a punt 24 yards to the Arkansas 44. Fullback Jesse Branch cashed the six points on an eight-yard burst through the middle.

Rain, which fell throughout the first half, did as much as Rice to keep the Porker offense in check. The showers stopped after intermission and Arkansas went to work.

Cissell's two first half kicks were set up by Rice fumbles at the Rice 11 and 32.

Hornung May Have Gotten Packer Title

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Paul Hornung, Army-bound after another prolific point performance, may have wrapped up a second straight Western Conference title for the Green Bay Packers while Pete Previte had a hand in forging a two-way scramble for Eastern honors between New York and Philadelphia.

That's the situation in the National Football League after Sunday's showdown struggles in which Hornung led the Packers to a 31-28 triumph over Chicago and the Giants moved into a first-place tie in the Eastern sector by appending the defending league-champion Eagles 28-21.

It was Previte—not a player, scout or coach, but one of the Giants' clubhouse attendants—who devised the stunning pass maneuver that gave New York a key touchdown and went a long way toward keeping the Eagles from matching Green Bay's progress toward another title.

With the Giants leading 17-7 late in the second period, Coach Alie Sherman decided to give Previte's play, designed to get the team's fastest players downfield under a Y. A. Tittle pass, a try and into the game came defensive halfbacks Erich Barnes and Jim Patton.

The Giants talked it over in the huddle, called for Previte's maneuver—titled with simplicity "the play that worked in practice Friday"—and Tittle arched a long one that Barnes grabbed for a 62-yard TD that gave New York an insurmountable lead.

Hornung scored 19 points as the Packers knocked the Bears into third place in the West. Detroit's Lions moved up to second place, a game and a half behind, with a 45-14 wallowing of the St. Louis Cardinals while Cleveland stayed a game behind in the East by beating Washington 17-6.

In other games, Los Angeles stopped the shotgun offense and upset San Francisco 17-7, Minnesota whipped Baltimore 28-20 and Pittsburgh crushed Dallas 37-7.

Quarterback Bart Starr passed for three Green Bay touchdowns, or a 34-yard pitch to Hornung, who brought his league-leading scoring total to 130 points by adding an eight-yard scoring run, four extra points and a 31-yard field goal in what may be his last game for the Packers this season. He is scheduled to report Tuesday for active military duty.

The Packers (7-1) needed every point as the Bears (5-4) fought back from a 28-7 halftime deficit to close the gap mainly on TD passes 15 and 29 yards from Billy Wade to Mike Ditka, who also had grabbed a 47-yard heave from Wade in the first quarter. The Eagles (7-2), winners of

Ed Stone, No. 1 Architect, Lectures in His Home State

U. S. Best, He Returns to University

FAYETTEVILLE — Ed Stone settled his bear-like frame into the cushions of a modernistic couch and sent his large, delicate hands fumbling through the pockets of a checkered jacket for a nonexistent cigarette.

Someone gave him one. He lit it, puffed twice, relaxed, and in a slow, Southern drawl began to chat with three reporters. Edward Durrell Stone, the Fayetteville native who is generally recognized as America's leading architect, was to have been the object of a press conference. But, his easy, informal, unhurried nature turned the deal into a group discussion. Before the hour-long interview ended, reporters were answering Stone's questions.

"And you are with what newspaper, Mrs. Donat?" he asked Mrs. Pat Donat of Fayetteville. "The Northwest Arkansas Times," she said.

"You know, I used to deliver that paper!" he exclaimed. "Would you do me a favor and give my best to Ted (Executive Editor Ted Wylie) and Hal (Publisher Hal Douglas)?"

And so it went for sixty fleeting minutes.

Stone is back in Fayetteville, the city he still calls home, to lecture at the University of Arkansas, his alma mater, and take part in Homecoming activities.

The illustrious designer of such structures as the American Pavilion at the Brussels World's Fair, the American Embassy in New Delhi, India, the revolutionary El Panama Hotel, and the New York Museum of Modern Art discussed frankly his feelings about American architecture.

"America is still a young country," he said quietly. "It is ready historically for the development of the arts, but 90 percent of the people of this most prosperous nation have never been outside of it. They have no framework of reference in which to place the arts."

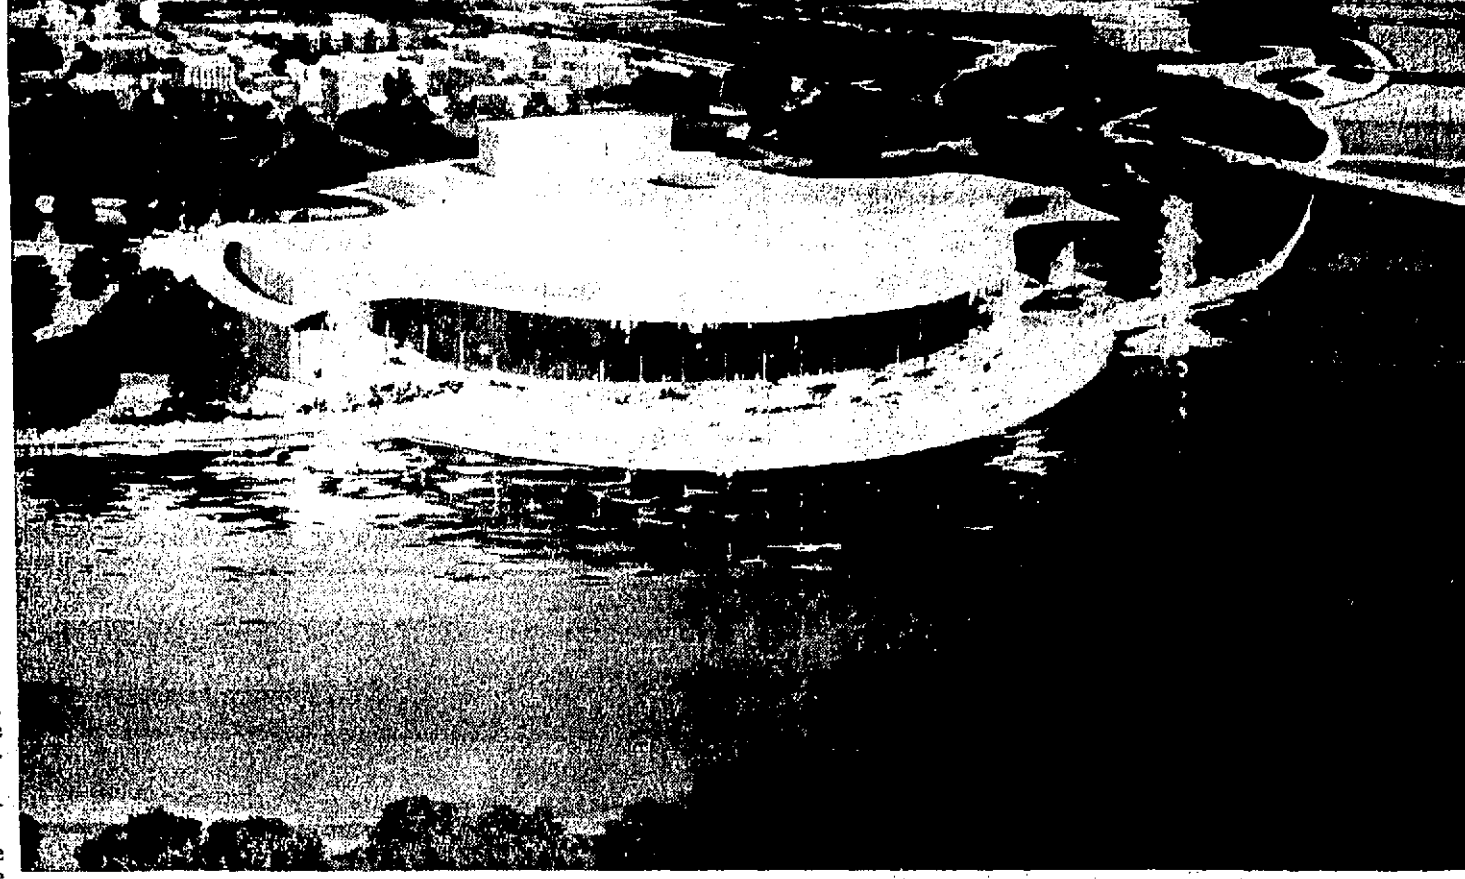

This statement prefaced another about American architecture implied, not yet fully appreciated by the majority of people.

"But they are learning, and rapidly," he went on. "And I am very optimistic. Take the University, for example. It has produced some 95 architects who are going to influence this movement toward beauty."

"What we must seek is permanence."

"Is that the key to your success?" someone asked. Stone grinned and fumbled for a stone cigarette which wasn't there.

"Well, I try to avoid walking down the blind alleys."

ARCHITECT EDWARD D. STONE'S DESIGN FOR THE new U. S. Cultural Center will dominate the Potomac river in the national's capital. The Arkansas alumnus has won high praise for his works around the world.

San Diego, Houston in American

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF
Associated Press Sports Writer

A repeat of last year's American Football League championship game became a stronger possibility today with San Diego already in it and Houston leading the fight for the other berth.

In the case of Houston, however, there still are some obstacles of note, the main one being San Diego itself.

Houston beat Boston 27-15 Sunday to take over the lead in the Eastern Division. It was the Oilers' fourth straight triumph in a surge that pulled them from the cellar.

San Diego won its tenth straight game as it edged Denver 19-16 and the victory wrapped up the Western Division championship for the second year. San Diego, playing as Los Angeles last season, lost to Houston for the championship.

Houston is just one-half game to the good over Boston and New York and the Oilers play the latter at Houston Sunday in the second straight showdown. Boston meets Oakland Friday night and is expected to win its game, moving back into first place if Houston should lose. In that event

New York also would be tied for first.

Both Houston and Boston still have to play San Diego and that is where the Chargers' influence over which they will meet in the playoff comes in. That is, unless San Diego beats both of them. That might react in favor of New York, which already has played San Diego twice and lost both times.

For the nonce, however, the only concern Houston has is New York, which beat Oakland 23-12 last week to hang in the race for the Eastern Division title.

San Diego plays Dallas at San Diego Sunday and it's quite a let-down. Before the season started Dallas was the favorite and was supposed to sweep through the Western Division ranks. The Texans have now lost four in a row and are out of the race by 6½ games.

Dallas took a 30-20 drubbing from Buffalo Sunday and enhanced its reputation for being able to lose more games in the last minutes than anybody. Buffalo scored twice on Texan errors in the final five minutes.

Wally Lemm, coach of Houston, is in a most fortunate position—having two quarterbacks who can go in and keep things moving. George Blanda got the Oilers away and winging as he passed for a touchdown and kicked two field goals, then Jack Lee came off the bench to guide the Oilers to the touchdown that nailed down the decision.

Denver led the mighty Chargers 9-0 at the half and an upset appeared in the making. But Jack Kemp fired up and pitched a 91-yard scoring pass to Keith Lincoln. Dick Harris of the San Diego defense brigade snared an enemy throw and ran it back 30 yards for a touchdown and the Chargers were ahead.

A Frank Tripucka pass to Al Frazier that covered 87 yards gave Denver the lead once more, then Kemp wrapped it up with a 16-yard scoring throw to Bob Scarpino.

One other game is on schedule Sunday—Buffalo at Denver. It will mean nothing in the race.

Texas Heads the List of Bowl Choices

By ED CORRIGAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

The annual scramble among college football's elite for postseason bowl assignments was under way in earnest today with less than a half dozen squads able to relax.

Texas, riding like a prairie wind toward the national title, is one. Then there are Alabama, Louisiana State, Mississippi and Colorado. All the others still are sitting on pins and needles hopefully awaiting bids.

Texas (8-0) is virtually assured the Southwest Conference title and the host spot in the Cotton Bowl. Mississippi (7-1) probably will provide the opposition.

Alabama (8-0), second-ranked in the weekly Associated Press poll behind Texas, is rolling toward the Southeastern Conference crown and a bid to the Sugar Bowl. "Bama also has been sounded out by the Rose Bowl."

Louisiana State (7-1) probably will provide Alabama's opposition in a head-on meeting of SEC powers. They don't meet during the regular season and the game would be a natural. Alabama has a tougher this week in Georgia Tech, but the Crimson Tide probably can afford a defeat and still get home free.

Colorado (7-1) looms as the Big Eight champion and should head for the Orange Bowl. The Buffaloes, beaten out of the conference by Utah, 21-12, last Saturday in one of the major upsets of the day, can still be tied for the title.

By Kansas. But the Buffs licked the Jayhawks earlier in the season. The Orange Bowl reserves the right to pick any Big Eight team, champion or no.

Georgia Tech (6-2) was assured a spot in the Orange Bowl until it was upended by Tennessee, 10-6, in another Saturday surprise. Tech probably still will get the call.

The Rose Bowl, granddaddy of them all—assuming it doesn't get Alabama—probably will go back to the Big Ten, although it no longer is under any obligation to do so. That might mean Minnesota (6-1). The Gophers no doubt would like to go back to Pasadena in hopes of making amends for their poor showing against Washington last Jan. 2. UCLA is the favorite for the host spot although it must get past Southern California to wrap it up.

The GatorBowl could wind up with Maryland (6-2) and Arkansas (6-2). That would leave the other bowls to shift for themselves for the remainder of the talent.

The rash of upsets Saturday left just three major teams undefeated and untied—Texas, Alabama and Rutgers. Texas clobbered Baylor, 33-7; Alabama crushed Richmond, 66-0, and Rutgers defeated Delaware, 27-19, for No. 7.

Besides Colorado and Georgia Tech, powerhouses like Michigan State and Missouri, along with California and Oregon where victims of upsets, Purdue edge Michigan State, 7-6, when Don Brumm blocked a conversion attempt. Oklahoma, the ex-Big Eight king, nipped Missouri, 7-0. The Air Force Academy, which had lost five of seven games, turned back California, 15-14, and Washington State dropped Oregon, 22-21.

This Saturday, Texas plays Texas Christian, Ohio State, No. 3 in the AP poll last week—and a possible Rose Bowl choice if Minnesota falters—goes against Oregon. Louisiana State has a date with Mississippi State while Minnesota faces dangerous Purdue.

Michigan State tangles with Northwestern, Mississippi will have no SEC game with Tennessee. Colorado will try to a snap back against Nebraska, and Missouri meets Kansas State.

Colt Gives Fine Present to Trainer

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sports Writer

T. V. Lark gave Paul Parker the wedding gift he wanted most when he beat Kelso in the $100,000 Washington D.C. International race at Laurel Saturday.

The 39-year-old trainer of the bay 4-year-old was married last Wednesday. He told every one who would listen that his colt would give him the perfect wedding present by winning the International.

"T.V. Lark is at his best. I'll be surprised if we don't win," said Parker, 39, and jockey Johnny Longden backed him up. "T. V. Lark is good now, maybe at his peak," declared the 54-year-old riding veteran, who hung up the 5,557th victory of his career when he booted T. V. Lark home by ¾ length over Kelso in a track record 2:26.1 for the mile and one-half over grass.

Kelso, the American Horse of the Year in 1960 and ridden by the premier stakes jockey, Eddie Arcaro, seemed a solid combination to the majority of bettors, however. They sent him off the 2-to-5 favorite with T. V. Lark the ($9.20) second choice.

"We just ran into a tiger and got beat," Arcaro said. "I thought I could put T. V. Lark away any time I wanted. When I couldn't shake him at the quarter pole I knew I had my hands full."

The foreign horses never threatened. Venezuela's Prepucci finished third 12 lengths back of Kelso, and it was another 10 lengths back to the Soviet Union's Zabeig. Then came France's Mig, Denmark's Wunderboy, Ireland's Sail Cheoil and Irtysh of the Soviet Union.

ggers defeated Delaware, 27-19, for No. 7.
